Course content

While international financial institutions such as the World Bank or the International Monetary Fund are subject to intensive academic research and normative concern, regional development banks have gained significantly less attention of academic scholars, media and a broader public. Indeed, we know relative little about the place, role and significance in the international political economy of international organizations such as the African Development Bank, the Inter-American Development Bank, the Asian Development Bank, the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development or the subregional entities such as the West African Development Bank, the Black Sea Trade and Development Bank or the Caribbean Development Bank. The lack of broader knowledge and wider spread attention is the more astonishing given the history of the organizations and their significance in the respective regional context.

The purpose of the seminar on the political economy of regional development banks is threefold. Firstly, we want to develop a basic understanding of what regional development banks are and do. Accordingly, we delve into their genesis and development as well as into their organizational features such as membership, resources and governance structures. Secondly, we will address their actual operation and look at their funding policies, practices and changes over time. Thirdly, we take an interest into the theoretical interpretations about the role of regional development banks and the and dynamics between donors, banks and borrowers. The questions to be asked in this context relate amongst other issues to the drivers of funding policies (donor-driven?), to the effect of the emergence of rising powers (catchword: BRICS) or to the general trend of the development (institutional isomorphism?).

Term papers

- Term papers must be written without anyone else's help and in accordance with the known quotation standards, and they must contain a declaration of authorship.
- The documentation of sources (quotations, bibliography) has to be done throughout and consistently in accordance with the APA or MLA standards. The indications of the sources of information taken over verbatim or in paraphrase (quotations) must be integrated into the text in accordance with the precepts of the applicable quotation standard, while informative and bibliographical notes must be added as footnotes (recommendations and standards can be found, for example, in METZGER, C. (2017), Lern- und Arbeitsstrategien (12th ed., Cornelsen Schweiz).
- For any work written at the HSG, the indication of the page numbers both according to the MLA and the APA standard is never optional.
- Where there are no page numbers in sources, precise references must be provided in a different way: titles of chapters or sections, section numbers, acts, scenes, verses, etc.
- For papers in law, the legal standard is recommended (by way of example, cf. FORSTMOSER, P., OGOREK R. et SCHINDLER B. (2018, Juristisches Arbeiten: Eine Anleitung für Studierende (6. Auflage), Zürich: Schulthess, or the recommendations of the Law School).

Examination content

The three parts of the examination complement each other: a steady, active participation encourages students to read the mandatory literature in time; the presentation is an important contribution to the empirical knowledge in classroom; finally, the reflection paper encourages to deepen selected aspects on one or more cases.

Active participation: reading; substantial contribution to the discussions

Presentation/Group work: see slides of 27.9.2018; for each session, your group is required to present and upload their input of their project to the topic of the day.

Examination relevant literature

The literature will be provided before the start of the first lesson.
