Learning objectives

The course is divided into two parts: Introduction to Constitutional Law (part 1) and Introduction to Public International Law (part 2).

The learning objectives of part 1 are: Discussing different areas of constitutional law in Switzerland to assess the basic legal concepts underlying the Swiss state such as the principle of the "Rechtsstaat", federalism, democracy, social justice and the fundamental rights guaranteed by the Swiss Constitution.

The learning objectives of part 2 are: Discussing different areas of public international law to assess the basic legal concepts underlying the international order such as the legal sources, the subjects of international law, the Charter of the United Nations, international human rights law, international humanitarian law, international criminal law, international economic law and international environmental law as well as state responsibility and international dispute settlement.

Course content

The course offers a comprehensive introduction to constitutional law and public international law. Constitutional law refers to a set of basic legal principles and rules that define the nature, function and organization of a state. In a first part, the course thus discusses the historical development, sources and interpretation of the Federal Constitution of the Swiss Confederation of 18 April 1999. In addition, the central principles and structures of the Federal Constitution of the Swiss Confederation are studied. The course gives students the opportunity to learn about the basic legal concepts underlying the Swiss state such as the principle of the "Rechtsstaat", federalism, democracy and social justice. Key aspects of the course are also the fundamental rights guaranteed by the Constitution.

Main Topics:

- Introduction
- Historical Development
- Sources of Constitutional Law
- Constitutional Interpretation
- Constitutional Principles
 - o Principle of the "Rechtsstaat"
 - o Federalism
 - Democracy
 - o Social Justice
- Parliament, Government and the Judiciary
- Fundamental Rights
- Protection of Fundamental Rights

Constitutional law is more and more influenced by public international law. Public international law is a set of rules regarded and accepted as binding in relations between states and other international actors. In a second part, the course thus explores the highly important and dynamic area of public international law. The course offers an overview of the central principles of public international law and discusses some specific international law regimes, such as the United Nations system, international human rights law, international humanitarian law, international criminal law, international environmental law and international economic law. Key aspects are also state responsibility and international dispute settlement systems.

Main Topics:

- Introduction
- Sources of Public International Law
- Subjects of International Law
- The Charter and the Organs of the United Nations
- International Human Rights Law
- Interaction Between National and International Law
- International Humanitarian Law
- International Criminal Law
- International Environmental Law
- International Economic System
- Responsibility and International Dispute Settlement

Course structure and indications of the learning and teaching design

The course is subdivided into different modules and consists of lectures, exercises and independent studies.

Lectures

The lectures will take place each week on campus. The lectures before the semester break focus on the introduction to constitutional law; the remaining lectures discuss the basic principles of public international law. The lectures are based on the relevant literature as defined in this factsheet.

Exercises

The impact of constitutional law and public international law will be illustrated with cases. These cases will be discussed and explained in exercises in smaller groups. The exercises will take place every other week at different times. The cases deepen the theory as explained in the lectures. You should, therefore, prepare the literature and the lecture on the respective topic before attending the exercises.

Independent Studies

There will be catalogues with questions regarding constitutional law and public international law available on StudyNet/Canvas. You will have the opportunity to discuss these questions and the answers in independent study groups. These independent study groups will take place every other week.

Guest Lecture

A guest lecture is designed in particular for foreign students who are not yet familiar with the political system in Switzerland. Detailed information about the guest lecture will be available on StudyNet/Canvas.
