Course information

Course prerequisites

The course covers both theoretical models as well as empirical applications. Solid background in microeconomics and microeconometrics is required.

Learning objectives

In this course students will:

- learn about the interplay of (mental) health and the labor market,
- understand specific challenges in the fields of health and labor economics,
- develop their own sketch of a research project, and
- synthesize and defend their ideas in a presentation and short report.

By the end of this course students will have acquired a good overview of current topics in the intersection of health and labor economics. They will be able to use their knowledge to develop their own research projects.

Course content

This course introduces into selected topics in the fields of health and labor economics. Its aim is to acquaint students with theories and applications in health and labor economics and to encourage the development of research interest in these fields.

Students will get to know state-of-the-art theoretical models and empirical papers at the current research frontier. After this course, students will be able to develop their own research projects in these fields.

Course structure and indications of the learning and teaching design

The course is targeted to PhD students in economics and econometrics.

The course is organized en-block and consists of 6 days with four hours each.

- Introduction to health and labor economics, with a focus on the interplay of both
- Discussion of applied papers at the research frontier, with a focus on important research questions and empirical identification

- Introduction to data available for research (e.g. SHARE, administrative data)
- Self-study time to develop a research project idea and Q&A sessions
- Student presentations of their research project ideas

Independent study is expected as students will be required to:

- Read course literature prior to the lectures
- Prepare a presentation of a research project idea
- Write a short report on the research project idea

Course literature

Empirical papers provided on StudyNet.

Term papers

Written work must be written without outside help according to the known citation standards, and a declaration of authorship must be attached, which is available as a template on the StudentWeb.

Documentation (quotations, bibliography, etc.) must be carried out universally and consistently according to the requirements of the chosen/specified citation standard such as e.g. APA or MLA.

The legal standard is recommended for legal work (cf. by way of example: FORSTMOSER, P., OGOREK R., SCHINDLER B., Juristisches Arbeiten: Eine Anleitung für Studierende (the latest edition in each case), or according to the recommendations of the Law School).

The reference sources of information (paraphrases, quotations, etc.) that has been taken over literally or in the sense of the original text must be integrated into the text in accordance with the requirements of the citation standard used. Informative and bibliographical notes must be included as footnotes (recommendations and standards e.g. in METZGER, C., Lern- und Arbeitsstrategien (latest edition)).

For all written work at the University of St.Gallen, the indication of page numbers is mandatory, regardless of the standard chosen. Where page numbers are missing in sources, the precise designation must be made differently: chapter or section title, section number, article, etc.
