Course information

Course prerequisites

The course assumes that you have a basic knowledge in finance at the beginning of the course. A good reference point to examine whether you have the necessary background are the four chapters of the Higgins textbook (see course literature).

Learning objectives

The objectives of the course are:

- to provide a theoretical basis and a practical understanding of financial management,
- to obtain a comprehensive understanding of value based management and
- to understand the practical implications of the value based management concept.

Course content

The course focuses on value based management (VBM), one of the major financial topics of recent times. Starting with the basics of financial statement analysis, the course continues with the basics of business planning ending with the major topic of enterprise valuation. Students will be exposed to the major concepts of enterprise valuation and identify the major value drivers which can be found in the corporate reality.

The learning objectives of the course are as follows:

- to understand the key ingredients of corporate financial statements
- to realize how corporate financial performance is measured
- to gain the tools to evaluate the financial viability of corporate capital expenditure projects
- to master different enterprise valuation technologies in order to arrive at a meaningful corporate valuation and identify the underlying value drivers

Course structure and indications of the learning and teaching design

The course sessions comprise of plenary discussions and small cases, ending with relatively complex, real-world cases. You are required to prepare each class by studying the reading material for that session.

Course literature

Robert C. Higgins, Analysis for Financial Management, 12th ed., McGraw Hill, 2019 (the 11th ed. is also fine for the course)
