Course information

Course prerequisites

This course mainly serves as a preparation for students who participate for HSG in National Model United Nations in New York in spring 2025. Students should only take this course if they have the intention of participation in the NYC spring course. Students should apply for this course by separate application procedure.

Learning objectives

Content component: Students gain solid knowledge about the United Nations and how small states can pursue their interests in the context of General Assembly meetings.

Performance component: Students represent a state at the National Model United Nations Conference 2024 and apply their knowledge in committee negotiations.

Course content

The course carries on for two terms (fall term 2024 and spring semester 2025). Some sessions in fall term introduce the students to the United Nations in general, its workings, and its problems; the skills needed for successful participation in NMUN are also trained (research, writing and drafting, public speech, representation, etc.) by various means (simulations, negotiations, etc.). In spring term, students mainly prepare participation in the simulated UN General Assembly conference, which takes place in New York and where students act as the delegates of the UN member state assigned to HSG. Students may expect to have a say in the selection of the country which they would like to represent in New York (while the final assignment is made by the organizers of the NMUN by the beginning of November; our influence is limited in this regard).

A faculty advisor (Claudia Brühwiler) and a head delegate (Elias Braunwarth) support the students in their effort. However, students are expected to engage very actively in the course; a high level of commitment as well as the ability to work in teams under pressure are indispensable. English language knowledge is a prerequisite, as it is the working language of the course (as well as of NMUN). Students are expected to make a coordinated, sustained effort to raise funds to finance the trip to New York

Course structure and indications of the learning and teaching design

The class will alter between weekly meetings and block meetings, with the latter giving Delegates enough time to get used to the conference format and run simulations. Some class sessions take place in fall term; additional meetings take place in spring term depending on need. Day trips are planned, most likely to take place in fall 2023 (and, of course, the week-long trip to New York), but are subject to confirmation. Further information on NMUN is available at www.nmun.org or our webpage: www.nmun.ch

A variety of didactic approaches will be used in this class. Simulations of committee sessions provide students with hands-on experience and allow them to hone their negotiation and speaking skills. Traditional input lectures, games, and student-led discussions enrich the learning experience.
