Course information

Course prerequisites

There are no formal prerequisites for this course. Students applying for the course have to be SIM students or exchange students on Master level.

The course is limited to 30 participants. SIM students and exchange students are invited to apply for the course through the bidding system within the given time frame.

In order to be graded officially (i.e. receive credits) students may not miss more than 2 half-day lessons. If students do miss more than 2 half day lessons they will be excluded from the course.

Learning objectives

- Appreciate M&A as a multi-disciplinary phenomenon and learn the legal and strategic fundamentals of M&A
- Learn to think about the drivers, processes, and outcomes of M&A from a variety of different angles and theories
- Develop an understanding of the role of different actors in the M&A process, such as CEOs, shareholders, corporate M&A departments, consultants, regulation authorities, and investment banks
- Gain insights about the sub-processes and best practices in deal-making and post-merger integration
- Understand the prototypical challenges associated with M&A - and their underlying reasons

Course content

Mergers and Acquisitions are widely adopted means for growth and change of corporate scope. After the sudden deceleration of deal activity in response to the global pandemic, annual transaction volumes recovered quickly, reaching an unprecedented level of 5 trillion US dollars in 2021. Corporate takeovers can add new competences, enable new market entry or increase economies of scale. However, they often present disruptive events for parties both within and outside the focal organizations. Given their high degree of risk and complexity, mergers and acquisitions frequently fail to realize their intended objectives.

This interdisciplinary course deals with managerial and legal issues in the design of acquisitive growth strategies, in the execution of transactions as well as in the integration of companies. Analyses of recent M&A cases illustrate these issues. Additionally, we invite a number of specialists on different aspects of the M&A process, who will share their experience and practical insights.

Course structure and indications of the learning and teaching design

Part 1: Managerial and Legal lectures

In the first part of the fall term six classes will be conducted: Three classes related to strategic and managerial issues of M&A (Welch Guerra) and three classes related to legal issues of M&A (Binder & Gutzwiller).

Part 2: Block Seminar - The Practice of M&A

In the break of the fall term we conduct a block seminar related to practical issues of M&A. With a number of guests from different companies sharing their insights, we will work on different case studies and deep-dive into the practice of M&A.

Course literature

A detailed outline of the literature will be provided in the syllabus of the course. The relevant course materials can be found on Canvas usually at least a week before each lecture.
